Louis Armstrong and the Physicality of Trumpet Playing

August 7, 2011 1-2pm · NOMC-Sponsored Seminar at Satchmo Fest w/Kris Chesky, John Snyder, Randall Dick

This session will examine the physical nature of being a musician in general and playing the trumpet in particular. An initial examination of the forces produced on the lips and mouth through a computerized mouthpiece will help the audience better understand the nature of "Satchmo Syndrome".

The presentation will then expand into a more general discussion of the value of wellness for all performing artists, similar needs of performing artists and traditional athletes (hydration, core strength), unique issues of the performing artists (hearing loss) and a new collaborative initiative, ATHLETES AND THE ARTS which integrates the science of sport and the performing arts for the mutual benefit of both.
